The ironworks is aglow

The Völklinger Hütte World Cultural Heritage Site is the world's only fully intact ironworks from the zenith of the industrial era. Today, with its many halls, open spaces and fascinating tangles of pipe systems, it offers a unique setting for international exhibitions, festivals and concerts. What's more, it's a place where culture and nature meet: what was once the "hell" of the coking plant, for example, is now a truly wild Paradise.

The image shows the interior of a massive industrial building, likely a museum or historical site. The space is filled with a complex network of dark steel beams and girders that support a high ceiling. In the foreground, there are several sets of stairs with metal railings, some of which are illuminated with small lights. The floor is a mix of concrete and a checkered tile pattern. In the background, various pieces of industrial machinery are visible, including large flywheels and pipes. The lighting is a mix of warm and cool tones, creating a dramatic atmosphere. The overall impression is one of a well-preserved industrial monument.

A monument of industrial culture

Völklinger Hütte's historical pig-iron production facilities are completely intact. Several kilometres of visitor walkways lead to milestones in the history of technology, such as the inclined ore lift, the sintering plant and the huge flywheels of the blowing engines, which once pumped air into the cowper stoves and blast furnaces. The blower hall is an exhibition and festival space with a truly unique aura.

In Paradise

In PARADISE, it is fascinating to observe how diverse flora and fauna have recaptured parts of the facility. PARADISE is now home to fish, frogs, foxes and wild boar, while birch trees and lilac flourish where once there was only heat, dust and fire. Winding paths lead to Ottmar Hörl's monumental 10-metre-high sculpture King Kong – a special surprise waiting at the end of the walkways.

A moving place of remembrance

Over the course of the two World Wars, more than 12,000 people were forced to work at Völklinger Hütte. The world-famous artist Christian Boltanski has created a poignant memorial to these forced labourers in the World Cultural Heritage Site. The thought of the daily work performed by ironworkers in normal times subsequently inspired Boltanski to create a second installation using lockers and voices of memory.

Events and festivals

Völklinger Hütte is a place that keeps reinventing itself: festivals, theatre productions and concerts interact with their multifaceted industrial surroundings to create extraordinary experiences. During the cultural joint venture “Staatstheater goes Völklinger Hütte” (5 September 2021), artists from Saarland’s State Theatre will perform in the middle of the former ironworks. In summer, the PARADIESFEST Paradise Festival celebrates the garden wilderness in the former coking plant with music, performance and dance.

1986

Photographs by Michael Kerstgens

25.4.21 – 6.2.22

In January, the Space Shuttle Challenger exploded; in April, there was a nuclear catastrophe in Chernobyl. But there was more to 1986 than an apocalyptic farewell to modernity. Michael Kerstgen's images of everyday life, sport and leisure reveal a year of surreal normality. At Völklinger Hütte, industrial production ceased in 1986, and indeed throughout Germany, the shift from an industrial society to a service and leisure society was becoming evident. It is precisely this shift that Kerstgen's photographs capture.

FUTURE LAB

10.10.21 – 27.3.22

In the FUTURE LAB, central questions about our present and past are subjected to artistic and experimental investigations. How are we going to live with the transformations caused by human beings and industrialisation over the past two centuries? The second Future Lab, "Speculative Nomads: From Ironworks to huts" focuses on a creative dialogue between local residents and spaces: the people of Völklingen, their history and their town.

A person wearing a shiny, metallic, skull-like mask and an orange jacket is crouching in a dark, industrial setting. The person is wearing black pants and black boots with red accents. The background is a complex structure of dark metal beams and stairs. The overall mood is gritty and industrial.

The World of Music Video

22.1.22 – 16.10.22

This major exhibition on the history of the music video and current developments in the form aims to examine videos' musical and artistic qualities as well as the burning issues they address, such as AI, climate change and gender questions. Large screens will appear between the huge blowing engines, while monitors will be installed in more private niches. With plenty of space to both dance and reflect, the exhibition provides a panorama of the genre and art form that has never been realised

Len Lye, Rainbow Dance, 1936

in this form. “The World of Music Video” promises to be a feast for the eyes – and ears! Music videos are signs of our times, an integral part of contemporary culture that is produced and broadcast all over the world. At the same time, these videos are a world of their own, a synthesis of music, dance and film. This major exhibition on the history of the music video and current developments in the form aims to explore this world, from Queen through Lady Gaga and Beyoncé to Indian, Japanese, Russian and African contributions to the form. All fixtures and carpets will be removed from the blower Hall to transform it into the perfect setting for musical projections. Experience around 90 music videos from more than thirty countries around the world. Among the musicians, artists and directors to be featured are: Jonas Åkerlund, Laurie Anderson, Roger Ballen, Beyoncé, Joseph Beuys, David Bowie, Björk, Childish Gambino, Chris Cunningham, Daft Punk, Deichkind, Billie Eilish, Garbage, Romain Gavras, Michel Gondry, Spike Jonze, John Landis, Lenin-grad, Little Big, Massive Attack, Nuka, Piero Pirupa, Psy, Pussy Riot, Yoko Ono, Queen, Rammstein, Stromae, Tracey Ullman, Vaundy, Andy Warhol, Yello and Zoot Woman.
